

Angels Bring Business Awards Event

Angels Bring Business, the networking club for women, is celebrating the achievements of women in business with a Women in Business Awards Ceremony 12th December, 1.30pm at the Showground. "It's been another tough year for businesses and we wanted to end the year on an upbeat note by shining a light on women who have achieved business success, shown leadership skills or started a business. It's important for both the individuals and businesses, as well as the local community, to applaud their hard work and gutsy performances," comments Wendy Spalding-Siracusa, one of the organisers.

PHOTOS BY FOXTOGRAPHY.

There will be five categories of awards, encompassing start ups to well established businesses, and the top prize will be Business Woman of the Year. Nominations are now live via www.angelsbringbusiness.com and tickets and business stands for the event can also be booked via the website or email: info@angelsbringbusiness.com. The five sponsors (University of Lincoln, Nicholsons accountants, Bishop Grosseteste University, the Lincolnshire Showground, and The Echo) will be helping to judge the entrants.

The event itself is open to both men and women to attend, and of course businessmen can nominate women within their own company or contacts they know such as clients, customers and suppliers. It promises to be an inspiring affair with two entrepreneurs speaking: Jenny Dawson of Rubies in the Rubble, herself an international award winning social entrepreneur, tackling food waste in London; and Rosalie Brewster a founding director of EllaPure, a fast track international and national company selling skincare and aromatherapy products. Plus of course it will be a great opportunity to network with other businesses.

"We are encouraging business women to come forward and be recognised," says Josephine Peacock, a Director of Angels.

"Winning an award will be a great way of improving your standing in the business community and boosting your confidence to take the next step forward". Don't miss out – the nominations close 8th November. Take a look at www.angelsbringbusiness.com where there is lots more information about the event and the Club itself.

Wendy Spalding-Siracusa and Josephine Peacock.